COURSE NUMBERING SYSTEM

Prior to July 1, 1974:

All courses numbered 1-99 were collegiate grade and carried transfer credit to four-year colleges and universities. Courses numbered 100 and up were not intended for transfer to four-year colleges; however all credit courses were used toward requirements for the Associates Degree.

July 1, 1974 to June 30, 1989:

- 1-49 Collegiate level and carried transfer credit to four-year colleges/universities
- 50-99 Collegiate level but not primarily designed for Baccalaureate transfer. Taught at the level and of such quality that acceptance is recommended at any college or university offering such course work or offering programs in which such course work will be appropriate.
- 100-199 Developmental/Remedial
- 200-299 Primarily designed at the technical level; usually will be courses specifically designed as part of a program leading directly to employment. Under special circumstances, a Baccalaureate degree granting institution may wish to accept such courses for transfer credit.

July 1, 1989 to Present:

- 1-49 Associate Degree Credit – applicable to the Baccalaureate Degree
- 50-99 Associate Degree Credit – not primarily designed for Baccalaureate Degree
- 100-199 Non-associate degree credit basic skills remedial courses
- 200-299 Non-associate degree credit courses that are either:
 - (1) Vocational courses intended to prepare students for vocational education or for occupations not requiring associate degree level skills for entry or,
 - (2) academic development courses, other than remedial basic skills, intended to prepare student to succeed in associate degree level course work.
